

Why is this even an issue. XM is a private for-profit company. As a subscriber I pay to have every possible station xm offers. Cable television can offer local stations and public broadcasting stations and in fact are required to do so. Because I have made a choice to listen to music instead of talking dj after talking dj am I now to be punished by not being able to hear traffic and weather as an additional service offered by my satellite radio company? Maybe the NAB should figure out a new and better way to do business. Because AM and FM radio stations are a take it or leave it choice and you get whatever they decide you should be allowed to hear, why should they be given special protections? They to are a for-profit industry, paid by advertisers not listeners. That is they're choice. XM is mine.
